Women and children in Timor-Leste enjoy gender equality and live free from violence

| Engagement with Government | Collaboration with feminist activists and movements | CSO Technical Accompaniment

The Nabilan Program

The Nabilan Program is a partnership<sup>1</sup> between the Australian Government and the Timor-Leste Government<sup>2</sup> to end violence against women and children in Timor-Leste.<sup>3</sup>

Nabilan partners with individuals, communities, activists and institutions to foster gender equality and positive social norms, attitudes and behaviours to prevent violence. We support organizations providing essential services to women and children experiencing violence.

We believe in a feminist, values-driven approach to program development and implementation, the fundamental principles of the rights of women and children, and the overwhelming benefits of gender equality for the entire society.

Our Core Pillars

Services

Nabilan partners with essential service providers to ensure high quality services.

We provide core funding and technical support to services offering shelter, safe house, legal and counselling support to women and children experiencing violence.

Prevention

Nabilan supports individuals, communities and institutions to act to prevent violence against women and children.

We partner with organisations working on gender equality and prevention programming.
